Senior Vice President Thomas A. Vetter, SIOR, on Industrial Demand

“I anticipate that high demand for quality industrial assets will still drive what has been a robust market well into 2018. Although much of this demand will continue to be derived from the usual suspect – e-commerce, restricted supply in the Manhattan and to a larger extent Brooklyn markets is further powering New Jersey’s quarter-to-quarter industrial velocity. Coupled with this, we have seen developers looking to transform existing industrial sites into multi-family properties placing even further stress on the supply pipeline. Due to the diversity of demand types, developers with a vision and the financial capabilities to carry out industrial projects in northern New Jersey can look forward to another strong year in 2018.”
